

Can I go directly to my physical therapist?

In the state of California, physical therapy practice acts require a diagnosis before a patient can see a therapist. Other states allow patients to go directly to physical therapists. In most cases, if you are not making significant improvement within 30 days, the therapist will refer you to/back to your physician.